

The DNA Murders

Gary Crookes

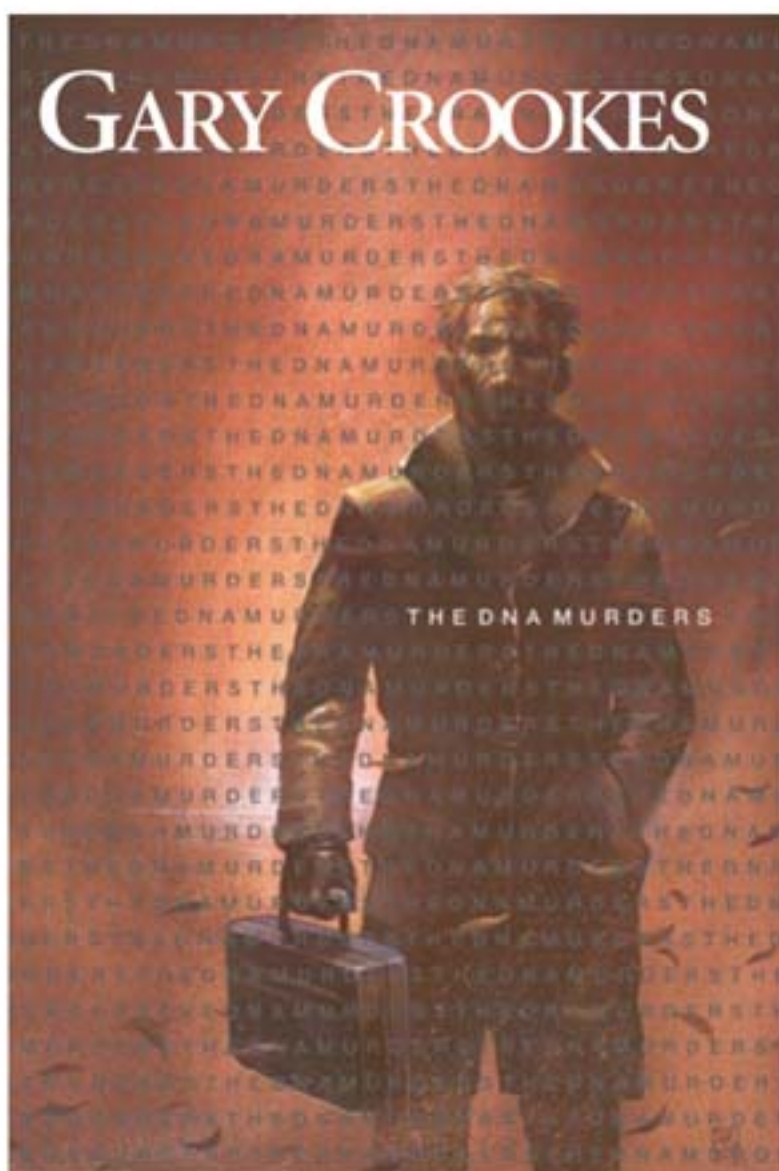

Special Agent Matthew Greenwood of the FBI is haunted by failure. For almost two years he, with his partner Mary Jane Piper, have tracked an unidentified murderer from one coast of the United States to the other; from the Great Lakes to the blistering heat of Florida. Their fugitive is precise, elusive, clever, but above all ruthless. Gruesome corpses litter his path, marking the course of his passing for the impotent Special Agents to follow.

But something is happening. The murderer is changing his patterns, leading them on a trail that will take them away from America. Will the change bring about unforeseen opportunities for the FBI, or will they lose him forever? Is this the chance they have been waiting for?

An intertwining plot that will captivate and hold you, characters who will revolt you, excite you, annoy you and win your heart. A story that will penetrate your soul.
